Global Public Health at the University of Missouri: Engaging global communities.

Transcend borders to engage global communities, develop global and cultural competency, and respond to public health issues around the world:

Study Global Public Health at MU!

A global opportunity for study:

Graduate Certificate of Global Public Health

The Graduate Certificate of Global Public Health offers training in foundational areas of global public health, including interdisciplinary perspectives in global health, biostatistics, development and evaluation of public health programs in developing countries, and epidemiology. Students and working professionals pursuing this Certificate will gain an understanding of global health issues, the ability to assess community concerns, and tools necessary to identify effective interventions.

Offered through the Mizzou MPH Program, 15 credit hours, includes a practical internship abroad or an internship with international communities in the United States. Some online courses available.

Find out more:

- For information on how to apply: http://publichealth.missouri.edu/programs_cert_global_health.php

- For information on costs and financial aid: http://gradschool.missouri.edu/financial/

- For more information or to make an appointment with our Academic Advisor, please contact the Master of Public Health Program: Phone: 573-884-6844 or Email: mumphprogram@missouri.edu

Master of Public Health Program
University of Missouri